The Beatitudes then, are, according to Willard, "...proof that, in [Jesus], the rule of God from the heavens truly is available in life circumstances that are beyond all human hope. The Nephite version is shorter, stating that God makes the sun to rise on the evil and on the good, while the Matthew version says he makes the sun to rise on the evil and sends rain on both just and unjust.

I can definitely see why this would upset you, and as a familyist the only thing I can say is that this was actually the turning point for me. In my opinion, any theology that denies the equality of human beings is fundamentally anti-American. Would you jump for joy and sign the dotted line?

Knowing that this might very well be my only time, this short space, fills me with a sense of urgency. I am grateful for the opportunity to share my thoughts. Strathearn, Thomas A. Sperry Symposiumed.
