Because I was so tall and thin, I sometimes appeared awkward. We were eating at the dinner table. I tightened my cinches and gathered my rein, Then eagerly mounted my good mustang, While full of joy was the song that I sang; For my good steed's head was turned toward home, O'er the desolate waste no more to roam. Heneverspokedowntomeorspokeinanegativemanner.Then I would come off guard and get to sleep another hour and a half, till the cook yelled 'Roll out' at half past. That night it come up an awful storm.
